

Quick Guide to Trusts and Tax Savings

Avoid Common and Costly Mistakes

Into Trust

I put my property in a living trust, will my property taxes go up?

NO

Flip for more

Out of Trust

My property is in a trust. If I take it out, will it be reassessed?

MAYBE

Flip for more

Parent

I inherited property from my parents' trust, will my property taxes go up?

YES

Flip for more

Grandparent

My grandparents passed away and I inherited property from their trust. Will it be reassessed?

YES

Flip for more

Sibling

I inherited property from my parents' trust, but I sold it to my sister. Will it be reassessed?

YES

Flip for more

Quick Guide to Trusts and Tax Savings

Avoid Common and Costly Mistakes

Into Trust

If your trust is revocable (can amend/cancel it), then your property will not be reassessed. If your trust is irrevocable (cannot amend/cancel it), then it is considered a change in ownership and the property will be reassessed. However, other savings programs that protect from reassessment may apply, including those that protect transfers between spouses, and parents and children. Providing the Assessor with a copy of the full trust document helps avoid confusion. After filing any deed, keep an eye out for requests for information from the Assessor. It's important to make sure the records match or are explained. Example: if you've changed your name, be sure to provide the appropriate documentation. See Rev. & Tax Code § 62\(d\).

Out of Trust

When property is taken out of a trust, reassessment will depend on who or what is receiving that property. Transferring property from your trust back into your name, or into another revocable trust created by you, will not cause reassessment. Transferring it to a third party or third party's trust, generally will cause reassessment. Again, other savings programs, such as those for spouses or parents and children may apply. Example: taking property out of your trust, and putting into your spouses name, is generally not a reassessable event. Be sure to provide supporting documentation to the Assessor, including a copy of the trust, to avoid complications. See Rev. & Tax § 62\(d\).

Parent

The trust itself does not protect from reassessment. The Parent-Child Exclusion allows property to be sold or given, to or from a parent (with or without a trust) without being reassessed. However, a Parent-Child Exclusion claim (known as Proposition 58) must be filed with the Assessor in a timely manner. If the transfer has occurred upon the death of a parent, you must separately notify the Assessor by filing a "Change in Ownership Statement, Death of Real Property Owner," in addition to the exclusion claim. See Forms BOE-502-D, ASSR 176 and BOE-58-AH, OWN-88, or Rev. & Tax § 63.1\(1\)\(a\).

Grandparent

While there is a protection for transfers from grandparent to grandchild (known as Proposition 193), it is only available if the parent(s) are deceased. If the parents are deceased at time of transfer, then a claim can be made in the same manner as the Parent-Child claim. If the parents are still living, then the transfer is not eligible and the property will be reassessed. If the inheritance occurs upon the death of a property owner, the Assessor must be separately notified with the "Change in Ownership Statement, Death of Real Property Owner." See Forms BOE-502-D, ASSR 176 and BOE-58-G, OWN 143, or Rev. & Tax § 63.1\(3\)\(a\).

Sibling

Transfers between siblings will be reassessed. Even if you and a sibling inherit equal shares of a property, and you subsequently transfer your share to a sibling, the transferred portion of the property will be reassessed. However, if your parent(s)' trust does not specify a pro rata distribution, then the trustee may be able to distribute the property to one sibling and assets of equal value to the other, thereby avoiding a transfer that would trigger reassessment. If there are not sufficient assets to equalize shares, the trustee may also be able to borrow against the property. Such action must be taken by the trustee, in the name of the trust. Remember it is not the trust that prevents reassessment: a Parent-Child Exclusion claim must be filed. See Board of Equalization Property Tax Annotation 625.0000.

For more information visit assessor.lacounty.gov.